

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

PWNED.COM CEO RESIGNS

LOS ANGELES (May 14, 2008) – PWNED.COM CEO, Chris Leach, has resigned from the company after nearly 5 months. CMO, Mark Bartkowiak is taking over temporarily as the company searches for a new CEO. Mark Bartkowiak has been with the company since 2007.

Although the explanation given was unclear for Leach's departure, but the chairman of the online gamer social website board wished him well and expressed appreciation for his "support and commitment through its company launch beta period."

PWNED.COM has been constantly growing daily with new members, and as well releasing the latest news in the gaming industry. In the midst of all this information, Chairman Andrew Briggs remains optimistic about finding a new capable CEO, "The board is confident that a new CEO will be selected who can fully utilize the opportunities presented by this next-generation social networking cycle to renew PWNED.COM's position as a major player in the video game industry," said Briggs.

About PWNED.COM

PWNED.COM is the world's fastest growing social networking website dedicated to video gamers of all ages. Members can earn PWNED Points through various activities including viewing and interacting with user friends, uploading pictures, rich media, posting game reviews and blogs, participating in polls and creating clans. PWNED Points may be redeemed for cash, video game consoles, iPods, video games, etc.

CONTACT INFORMATION:

EMAIL: PRESS@PWNED.COM

PWNED LLC

3538 Mentone #1.

Los Angeles, Ca 90034

###